Description

Redbridge is an old city that has been destroyed several times. However, its strategic location on the Red River meant that it was rebuilt again and again. The city is also called the western gate to the Kingdom of Vellairn and at the center of the city is an old stone bridge that spans the churning waters of the Red River. The middle section of the bridge can be opened to let trade vessels sail through. The city has a busy river port built around the temple of Tuphon, the god of the sea. In general Redbridge is seen as a dangerous city where strangers often lose their valuables or even their lives if they venture into the wrong parts of the city.
